The Battle Field of Gettysburg

A GRAPHIC AND ACCURATE PICTURE.

To the Editor of the Press:

SIR:—I have just returned from a visit to Gettysburg, and if you choose to accompany me in a long ramble over the field and hear what a participant in that battle has to say, well and good. In the main I tell the story as I was told it me, but it is hard to say anything new upon a theme already hackneyed by newspaper people, and I know what most people have a horror of—long articles. So that if your readers should grow skittish, you have my full permission to abbreviate, expunge, or omit at your pleasure. Assuming this article then to have escaped the fate of your waste paper basket, start with me on this fine November morning out the Emmettsburg road. For our companion and guide we have Captain A. Cavada, a gallant and accomplished young officer who served all through from Yorktown to Petersburg and for nearly two years on the staff of Major General Humphreys.

About a mile out we halt. The Captain is quite [illegible]. "Now I begin to feel at home. Let me take an observation. As these fences were not here then. All right. I've got it now. Do you see that big walnut on the ridge over there? That was General Humphrey's headquarters on the morning of Thursday, July 2d. Almost worn out with hard marching, I was aroused from my weary bivouac at daylight and ordered to post Col. Tippin's regiment—the 68th Pennsylvania—as a picket along here. Later in the day, the right of our division, Carr's brigade, held this brick house. Further down was posted Turnbull's battery. There below that barn stood Lieutenant Seeley's, and still further toward our left the batteries of Birney's division, under Livingston, Smith, Randolph, Clark and Winslow. I mention them all, for never were guns handled more beautifully. All suffered fearfully—Seeley's especially. He had hardly a man or horse left standing and was himself severely wounded. He was a gallant officer, and had risen from the ranks. Now go with me into that orchard. I want to find a certain apple tree which served as a rendezvous during the day for us staff officers and our orderlies. At one period, standing under it with Captains Humphreys and McClellan, a shell exploded in the tree, killing three of our poor orderlies, besides striking my horse." We found the tree—its limbs were shattered, and the top entirely gone.

"About 2 o'clock the whole 3d Corps moved out in line of battle over the open ground, and a more magnificent spectacle of 'living valor rolling on the foe,' I never witnessed. Away over on the bare spot of rising ground the rebels had planted two batteries with which they enfiladed our whole line, fairly sweeping it from left to right. Lord! how they pitched it into us! Longstreet's infantry debouched from those woods, and in a short time all around where we are standing—to the right, left and in front—along this road, through that peach orchard, away down toward Round Top, for hours the battle raged. General Sickles was wounded near that large barn. How well I remember this spot of ground. It was here, behind that stone fence that I had been ordered to post Col. Burling's brigade. On my way back, I passed the 114th Pennsylvania regiment, then commanded by my brother, Lieut. Col. F. F. Cavada. It had just been ordered to an advanced position beyond the road. I rode up and shook hands with my brother. 'Good bye Fred., look out for yourself, you are going into a hot place, and are sure to catch it.' So it turned out. The 114th, in connection with the 68th Pennsylvania, Col. Tippin, had a bloody fight of it, and lost heavily. My brother and his brigade commander, Gen. Graham, were both taken prisoners, the latter severely wounded. I never saw the rebels fight with such diabolical fury. The most murderous fire—canister, shrapnel and musketry—was poured into their very faces as it were, but nothing stopped them. The 3d Corps, those heroes of Chancellorsville and other bloody fields, led by Birney, Humphreys, De Trobriand, Ward, Graham and Carr—never fought more heroically.

A word of criticism here. At one period of the battle, Birney, being hard pressed, called upon Gen. Sykes, in command of the 5th corps, for assistance. Sykes had been ordered to support the 3d if called upon, but he returned for answer that he "would be up in time—that his men were tired and were making coffee." They did come up in about an hour, and, says Gen. Warren, in his testimony, "the troops under Gen. Sykes arrived barely in time to save Round Top, and they had a very desperate fight to hold it." And again of the operations next day: "When the repulse took place, Gen. Meade intended to move forward and assault the enemy in turn. He ordered an advance of the 6th corps, but it was carried on so slowly that it did not amount to much, if anything." Gen. George Sykes is a brave man, but entirely "too slow," so at least Gen. Grant seemed to think, for in the subsequent reorganization of the Army of the Potomac, the services of "Tardy George," No. 2, were dispensed with. The 5th as a corps, has a glorious record, and never failed to fight bravely when properly handled.

To resume the Captain's narrative: "As the afternoon wore on the pressure became greater and greater, until at last our whole corps, with the exception of Carr's brigade, and a few other regiments, was hurled down the slope, broken and discomfited, the rebels following in hot pursuit. Our losses were frightful. In our division, of 5,000 men, our loss was nearly 2,000." "Well Captain, you saw most of the heavy fighting done by this army, tell me, were you ever in a hotter place than this?" "Never but once—and that reminds me of a little story. In the attack upon the enemy's position at the first Fredericksburg, our division was ordered to storm the heights. As we were preparing to move, Gen. Humphreys—always a very polite man—turned round to his staff and in his blandest manner, remarked, 'Young gentlemen, I intend to lead this assault, and shall be happy to have the pleasure of your company.' Of course the invitation was too polite to be declined. That was the roughest place I ever was in, and I can't conceive, even to this day, how any of us got back alive." Our division lost nearly 1,100 men in about fifteen minutes. In this clump of bushes my horse received a second wound and fell dead under me. I managed to scramble over the ridge, where our men were being rallied, and soon after the sun went down and the rebels were beaten back beyond the road."

Capt. Chester, of our military family, was seen to go down in the melee, and after nightfall a party started out in search of him. We found him near that large flat rock, alive, but grievously wounded. His horse and faithful orderly both lay dead beside him, and across his legs a rebel soldier, whom he had killed with his revolver while in the act of plundering him of his watch. He was taken up tenderly and conveyed to the hospital on Rock Creek, where he died next day.

"With heavy hearts we now set about the task of burying such of our poor fellows as were within reach. Always the saddest of a soldier's duties, it was peculiarly so upon this occasion, for all felt that the rising sun would bring with it a repetition of this day's horrors and that, perhaps at this hour to-morrow some comrade might be performing the same sad office for us.

> 'Few and short were the prayers we said,
> And we spoke not a word of sorrow;
> But we steadfastly gazed on the face of the dead,
> And bitterly thought of the morrow.'"

In course of the day we paid a visit to Mr. Sherley's house, where we were most hospitably received. This house stands about the centre of the field, and is riddled from garret to basement. Traces of the conflict are to be seen on every side, including the last resting place of many poor southerners. Mr. Sherley's barn was burnt during the fight, and some of the wounded who sought refuge there perished in the flames. "These," said Mr. Sherley, producing some tin cans, "contain peaches that were growing in our orchard over there at the time of the battle. These are my trophies." In the front garden grows the beautiful shrub known as the 'burning bush,' luxuriant with its crop of red berries, typical of the blood shed at its roots. "Take some of the berries with you and plant them," said the kind old lady; "they will grow anywhere and will be pleasant mementoes of Gettysburg."

We next made our way to Little Round Top, where we had the pleasure of meeting Col. Bachelder. This gentleman is engaged in collecting the details of the battle and will no doubt produce a book of equal interest with his great map. I am sorry to hear him say that he intends designating this as "Weed's Hill," in honor of the general who fell on its top. Honor the memory of the brave man in some other way, Colonel, but don't seek to change this name. As Little Round Top it has already passed into history, and so it will be known forever. There are few finer views of the entire field than from this point, and here took place the closest and most sanguinary fight of Thursday. In front and to the right the 5th Corps had a heavy thing of it. On the height fought two of the noblest soldiers of the army, Vincent and Rice. The former laid down his life here and the latter at Spottsylvania a year after. All the little stone walls thrown up between the huge boulders are still here. Nothing is changed. Would that this could be said of other parts of the field. Inscriptions upon the rocks mark the spots where Vincent and Hazlett fell. Here, too, at the early age of twenty five, fell that accomplished soldier Col. O'Rourke, of the 140th New York. Graduating at the head of his class two years before he was at once assigned duty in the field and soon became distinguished for his reckless and impetuous courage. He was struck while mounted upon a rock gallantly animating his men. Fortunately the extreme left was held by that splendid regiment the 20th Maine, then under the command of Col. Chamberlain, afterwards one of Sheridan's heroes of the Five Forks. Firing away their last cartridge, Chamberlain ordered his regiment to charge down the hill, and succeeded in clearing its sides with the bayonet. The remarkable ledge of rocks known as the "Devil's Den," opposite Round Top, was occupied by the enemy's sharpshooters, one of whom had a safe position within the cleft and picked off our men with fatal accuracy. The face of the boulder behind which he lay is covered with marks of the minnies sent at him. One even "went for him" clean through the crevice, but missed. He was finally dislodged by a charge, and escaped through an opening to the rear. Seven muskets, it is said, were found in his hiding place. There is room enough for fifty. On the slope in front of this den lie bleaching the bones of the rebel dead, washed out by the rains. The scene of Crawford's charge, with our superb Pennsylvania Reserves, was to the right and in front of Little Round Top. Brigadier General Zook and Colonel Jeffards—the latter of the 4th Michigan—were killed in the field beyond. Colonel Jeffards was killed by a bayonet thrust while gallantly holding up with his own hands the colors of his regiment. Near that ploughed field, charging at the head of his brave "Bucktails," fell our Chester county neighbor, Col. Frederick Taylor. No death in the whole army was more sincerely mourned.

> 'Many the ways that lead to death, but few,
> Grandly; and one alone is glory's gate,
> Standing whatever freemen dare their fate,
> Determined, as thou wert, to die—or do!'

We now proceed along the line held by us on Friday, Colonel B. politely acting as guide. In that little grove, close by our lines, fell the rebel General Barksdale, on Thursday. This violent, brawling rebel started in search of "his rights," and this little pile of stones here marks the spot where he is presumed to have found them. It is said he was drunk when he started on the charge, and this may account for his headlong, reckless, bravery. True or not, "the story's still extant." Here in the thickest of the fight, exposing himself like a common soldier, the gallant Hancock received his wound. The advanced line of works was held by the Vermont brigade. It was commanded by Gen. Stannard, who subsequently gave an arm to the cause on the James. A pile of knapsacks, just as they were unslung, still lie mouldering here—on one the inscription "16th Vermont" is still visible. Even now the debris of battle—hats, shoes, cartridge boxes, bayonet scabbards, canteens &c.—lie scattered all over the field. Next we come to the position held by the "Philadelphia Brigade," composed of the 69th—"Paddy Owens' regulars," the 72d, Baxter's Zouaves, and that splendid fighting regiment, the 71st, or California, commanded originally by the lamented Baker, and subsequently by our gallant fellow townsmen, Cols. John Markoe and R. Penn Smith. This brigade—veteran fighters, every one of them—was led upon this occasion by a gallant New Yorker, Brig. Gen. Webb, and nobly was the honor of both cities sustained. Would that I had it in my power to particularize all the organizations conspicuous for courage and [illegible] in this great battle, but that would be to mention almost every regiment, battery and squadron engaged. From here we have an excellent view of Seminary Ridge, the line of woods whence the rebels issued, and the beautiful level fields over which they swept in their grand charge. This certainly is the most magnificent battle field in the world. The heights of La Belle Alliance and Mont Saint Jean in some respects resemble our Cemetery and Seminary Ridges, with the same gentle, undulating valley intervening; but at Waterloo the principal road runs at right angles, while here, parallel with the position. Speaking of the bombardment which preceded the charge, that experienced soldier, Gen. Hancock, says: "It was the most terrific cannonade I ever witnessed, and the most prolonged." A rebel eye witness describing it, says: "I have never yet heard such tremendous artillery firing. The very earth shook beneath our feet, and the hills and rocks seemed to reel like a drunken man. For one hour and a half this most terrific firing was continued, during which time the shrieking of shells, the crash of falling timber, the fragments of rock flying through the air shattered from the cliffs by solid shot, the heavy mutterings from the valley between the opposing armies, the splash of bursting of shrapnel, and the fierce neighing of wounded artillery horses, made a picture terribly grand and sublime." After this came the charge. Our eighty guns, planted on the crest from Cemetery Hill to Round Top, "volleyed and thundered," and, when the infantry joined in, so terrific was the fire that tore through them that the rebel columns presented the extraordinary spectacle of ten thousand men playing at 'leap-frog!' In spite of every effort the flower of Lee's veterans, directed by tried leaders such as Garnett, Armistead, Kemper, Wright, Posey and Mahone, failed in carrying our position, although at one or two points they charged up to and even over it. "What other than Southern troops would have made that charge?" Ay, sir, but what other than Northern would have met and repulsed it? Northern endurance upon this occasion was too much for Southern impetuosity and dash. "There swung the pine against the palm." In the bloody ruck hundreds of their best officers went down. It was the turning point of the great drama, and with the sun, on that 3d day of July, went down the sun of "the Confederacy" forever! Although known as "Pickett's charge," General Graham, whom I met here yesterday, informs me that Pickett himself was not in it. He describes him as a coarse brutal fellow, and says he treated him with the greatest inhumanity after the battle, whilst wounded, and a prisoner in his hands. The rebel corps commanders either did not expose themselves as freely as our own or they had better luck, for none were hit whilst we lost one, Reynolds killed, and two, Hancock and Sickles, wounded. The story told in Blackwood by Col. Freemantle of the British army who was present may help to explain it. He says, carried away by excitement, he rushed up to Longstreet, who was sitting on a fence 'quietly whittling a stick,' whilst watching the charge and said, "General Longstreet isn't this splendid, I wouldn't have missed it for the world!" "The devil you wouldn't," replied Longstreet, "why, don't you see we are getting licked like h—l?" We now crossed the Baltimore pike, calling on our way at the small frame building, on the Taneytown road, used as the headquarters of Gen. Meade on Friday. This will always be a point of great interest. The house is sadly shattered and the poor widow who owns it complains bitterly of her losses. "When I came home my house was all over blood, the sojers took away all my coverlits and quilts, two tons of hay, they spoiled my spring, my apple trees and every thing." She says a couple of hundred dollars would be a great help to her, and thinks she should get it from somewheres. Sure enough, why shouldn't the poor woman get it? In the garden of a cottage in the little village of Waterloo the visitor is shown the monument erected over the Marquis of Anglesea's leg, and the poor peasant has made quite a little fortune by exhibiting the boot cut from the leg, and the table upon which the amputation was performed. This hint might not be thrown away upon a more enterprising person, but I doubt if this poor, old, frowsy German woman will ever profit by it. To the right of Cemetery Hill was stationed the battery so furiously assaulted by Hays' brigade of Louisiana Tigers. The lunettes and traverses remain undisturbed and grass grown.

A little eminence in front was held and with distinguished honor, by that conscientious and patriotic soldier, Brigadier General Wadsworth. The works thrown up by our men on Culp's Hill are still to be seen, except such portion of the timber as is being removed by the owner of the ground. Only think of the meanness of the man who is pulling to pieces these monuments, and converting the timber into fence rails and cord wood! The effect of the furious fire poured upon Ewell's swarming columns is visible enough. Hardly a rock or a tree in front of these works has escaped. Many of the trees are covered and scarred with bullets as high as fifty feet from the ground. There was "wild," as well as deadly shooting here on that fearful Thursday night and early Friday morning. Along this rough, rocky hill fought our Geary, and that distinguished Rhode Islander, Brig. Gen. Green. Five months after at the desperate midnight battle of Wauhatchie, in Lookout Valley, this indomitable fighting officer only added to the laurels already gained at Antietam and Gettysburg. An inscription on a tree close by tells the story of a large mound in the ravine below: "To the right lie buried forty-five rebels!" From here we struck across to the scene of the first day's fight. In the following communication to Governor Curtin, Gen. Cutler tells us how the battle opened: "I owe a duty to one of your regiments, the 56th, and its brave commander Col. J. W. Hofmann. It was my fortune to be in the advance on the morning of July 1st. The atmosphere being a little thick, I took out my glass to examine the enemy, being a few paces in front of Col. H., he turned to me and inquired, "Is that the enemy?" My reply was, "Yes." Turning to his men, he commanded, "Ready—right oblique, aim—fire!" and the battle of Gettysburg was opened. The fire was followed by other regiments instantly, still, that battle on the soil of Pennsylvania was opened by her own sons, and is just that it should become a matter of history." Here is the ground fought over by our brave cavalrymen, under Pleasanton, Buford, Kilpatrick, Farnsworth, Merritt, Custer and Gregg. Never, in any preceding campaign, had the cavalry of this army rendered such distinguished and invaluable service. To meet the enemy was to overthrow them, until at last, it was only with the greatest difficulty that Stewart could get his men to stand at all. The next point reached was the scene of the bloody though unavailing struggle of the 1st and 11th corps. The marks of battle still abound, but the interest centers in the spot where Reynolds was killed. The General was nearly up with the skirmish line, "no place, say military men, for a corps commander;" "but that was just like John Reynolds;" and he had just dispatched several of his aids, Capts. Baird, Rosengarten and Riddle, on some special duties, and was himself watching the deployment of a brigade of Wisconsin troops, when the fatal bullet, fired by a sharp-shooter, struck him in the neck and he fell off his horse dead. Poor Reynolds!

> "There have been tears and breaking hearts for thee."

We now stand in the National Cemetery, on Cemetery Hill. Who can stand unmoved in this silent city of the dead? Here repose the precious offerings laid upon the altar of the country by the loyal States. Ordinarily the filling up of a cemetery is slow work—the work of years. Three days sufficed to fill this! And what is the reward of those brave men for their weary marching and days and nights of weary fighting? "Two paces of the vilest earth!" Here they lie, "those unnamed demigods" of rank and file; "Unknown," "unknown!" the only epitaph of hundreds. Yes, here they lie, "mustered" with beautiful military precision, rank upon rank, as if awaiting the order to appear in review before the Great Commander-in-Chief of us all!

> "Up many a fortress wall
> They charged—those boys in blue—
> 'Mid surging smoke and volleying ball
> The bravest were the first to fall—
> To fall for me and you!"

Who can ever forget those terrible days of July, that period of agonizing suspense! And when the news did come, Oh, how that sad catalogue pulled upon the heart-strings! Reynolds, Zook, [illegible], Weed, Farnsworth, Jeffards, Taylor, [illegible], O'Rourke, [illegible], Cross, Hazlett, [illegible], Willard, [illegible] and Miller.

> "Period of honor as of woes,
> What bright careers 'twas thine to close,
> Mark'd on thy roll of blood what names,
> To [illegible] and to Fame's
> Laid there their [illegible]"

So ends my story of Gettysburg.

MORE MORMON RECRUITS.—The Mormons have just received a batch of recruits from [illegible]. A Salt Lake paper says:

There isn't one of them, apparently, who might not as easily have been persuaded to emigrate to the heathen lands, where [illegible] prevails, as to this Mormon heritage, provided the same misrepresentations had been made to them by their proselyters. The arrival of those fair-haired girls from "Faderland," created considerable sensation among the "faithful." A lot of old fogies, who had already six or seven forlorn wives, were seen examining the new comers, most likely with the object of selecting one, in order to save her soul.

No Trouble About Principles.

There have been differences of opinion here and there as to this and that measure, but there are none upon questions of principle, and all others are very certain to be composed or settled in such manner as not to interfere in the slightest particular with the success of our party —Albany Democrat.

"No differences upon questions of principle" Here we have it exactly This announcement accords precisely with the general conduct of the party. Although the "Democratic" organization is composed of persons who hold widely different views on political questions, they nevertheless freely give up all independent sentiments and all individual opinions—constructing platforms which are founded on no positive doctrines, and which are therefore susceptible of as many interpretations as there are different shades of opinion among the members of the party.

The distinction which the Democrat makes between measures and principles, is shrewdly taken Properly interpreted, it means that there is perfect unanimity in the party on the great principle of turning their opponents out of power and working themselves in, but as regards mere measures that is to say, as regards what has been done by the loyal people of the United States to save the Government—the greatest latitude of opinion is allowable among "Democrats," provided that none openly call Andrew Johnson a patriot, and that all signify their willingness to support the "Democratic" ticket, whatever the materials of which it may be composed.

This happy way of establishing principles and settling disputes by laying down a platform which is broad enough for all to stand on, and which is just about equal in point of definiteness to the answer which the Delphic oracle gave to Pyrrhus, is entirely characteristic of the "Democratic" party. Its Conventions have little trouble in settling on the principles which are to be put forth as "Democratic" doctrine; for no great art is required to string together the usual batch of ambiguous resolutions, which invariably come out just before an election. "Democrats" never differ on questions of principle." How should they, when it is impossible to ascertain what those principles are? Should any inquiring member of the party, having a mind a very little above the stolid level of his fellows, fail to be satisfied with certain points in the platform, he can easily be reconciled by being told that the doctrine he is stumbling at may have any meaning he chooses to give it. In this way schisms are kept down, harmony is insured, and the consenting "Democracy" led up to throw a solid vote in favor of the "immutable and [illegible] principles" of Washington and [illegible], Hamilton and Jefferson, Calhoun and [illegible], Buchanan and Jeff. Davis, Vallandigham, Breckinridge, Horatio Seymour and Jo. [illegible] all of whom, as your "Democrat" will tell you, [illegible] in principle, and are equally good "Democrats."

So, then, the "Democracy" will have no trouble or dispute about principles. The resolutions of '66 will answer in the coming emergency as they have in many another. So great is the [illegible] of these [illegible] all-embracing [illegible] in the mind of the "gallant [illegible]" who has fled hither from "Federal tyranny," they may justify secession, treason and murder; while in the view of the "Democrat" who [illegible] himself to adopt these ideas, they [illegible] the [illegible] which are the only true bond of our National Union. As the Confederate [illegible] them, they give the right to [illegible] the Union; by the interpretation of many of his party brethren, they are the foundation on which the Union stands. At first blush it might seem as if all this were contradictory. So it would be, were it judged by ordinary rules. But when it is [illegible] that the "Democracy" starts with a resolve not to have any differences on [illegible] of principle," the mystery is cleared up. It is easy to see that where there is a predetermination [illegible] body of men to agree, there can be [illegible] over a matter which is not capable of [illegible] and which [illegible] is willing to let [illegible] according to their natural notions of its meaning.

COAL ON THE NEHALEM.—We were shown yesterday some samples of excellent coal from a vein discovered last September on a stream which flows into Nehalem river. The Nehalem is a small river which rises in the Coast Range and discharges its waters in the ocean at a point seven miles north of the mouth of Tillamook bay. There are two main forks of the stream which join each other a few miles above the mouth. About seven miles from the forks a considerable creek flows into the North Fork. On this creek the coal is found. The vein is about three feet in thickness It "crops out" for a distance of about one hundred feet along the creek, and then enters the hill. The coal is of a quality that cannot be excelled. There are indications that an abundance of it exists in that region.

The only difficulty in the way of making this coal immediately available is its remoteness from safe navigation. From the locality of the discovery to Tillamook Bay the distance is about fifteen miles. That Bay is accessible by small sailing craft; but the distance from the harbor to the coal beds must for a time prevent the mine from being worked with profit. Nehalem river can be entered by small steamers, but not by sailing vessels. Steamers can go up it for a considerable distance above the place where the coal is situated The time will come when this coal mine will be a source of profit; but its owners will probably have to wait as others have waited, to have their prospects take the shape of realities.

We learn that there is a large body of good agricultural land along the Nehalem It cannot be a great while until settlement will commence there In time, population will be crowded into this and other places through want of room in the older settlements

CONGRESS.—The Philadelphia Press remarks "The activity, ability and regard for the welfare of the country displayed by Congress from the commencement of the session have favorably impressed the whole nation. There is life, spirit and a desire to accomplish useful ends evinced in the proceedings at the Capitol which every patriotic citizen will readily recognize and applaud The old era, when Senators and Congressmen spent most of their time in discussing new measures to rivet the shackles of slavery on four millions of human beings, has passed away forever, and the [illegible] establishment of freedom throughout the Republic, and the promotion of the common welfare of all the citizens, are now the great standard subjects of consideration"

WOOLEN FACTORY —The last number of the Sentinel publishes a call for a public meeting at Ashland, Jackson county for the purpose of taking preliminary steps to organize a woolen manufacturing company at that place

New Orleans papers say that never before was there so heavy a demand in that city as now for all kinds of mechanics, many carpenters can earn eight dollars a day as journeymen

DEEDS OF HORROR —The insurrection among the blacks of Jamaica lasted but a single day How it was quelled let the words of the London Daily News describe

We cannot pollute our columns with more of such appalling details If but a the twentieth part of such tales as form the staple of the Jamaica newspapers—and which are narrated with heartiest applause—are true hell itself has broke loose in that wretched island But the demons are not the blacks who burst into the sudden fury of a single day and never afterward offered the resistance They are the white men, who for week after week have been holding their feast of blood who have by form of law taken fifty lives for each one that they themselves lost who have on pretence of a future insurrection made a whole region barren with extermination and unhabitable with the pestilence of putrefying bodies who gloat and jest over the tortures they inflict ere they mercifully slay who flog naked women and children and who blaspheme Almighty God with their thanks for His mercies vouchsafed in delivering their enemies into their hands

"It is no longer human nature that exists in that land drunk with blood and maddened with cruelty, our soldiers and sailors have become like wild animals, and have lost every vestige and sentiment of humanity while they bandy compliments on their common triumphs over panic stricken and fugitive wretches, over a foe who has never crossed a sword with them in fight, nor ever fired a musket-shot in their glorious campaign This awful business must be stopped if we would not have all civilization rise to execrate the name of Englishmen"

LETTER FROM SUMNER TO MRS COBDEN —The following letter appears in the London papers

BOSTON, October 5, 1865

My dear Madam I have been charged by the Convention of the Republicans of Massachusetts over which I had the honor of presiding to communicate to you resolutions unanimously adopted by them, expressing their grateful regard for the memory of your late husband, and their sympathy with you in your bereavement Knowing Cobden personally as I did for many years, and corresponding with him on public questions, I confess a sense of personal loss beyond even that of my fellow citizens He was the good friend of my country and he was my own private friend Therefore, in making this communication I desire to express my own individual grief His lamented death has caused a chasm, not only in his own country, but here in the United States We all miss him and mourn him He was a wise and good man. Though an Englishman by birth, his heart and all his faculties were given to mankind knowing well that the welfare and true glory of his own great country were best assured by such a dedication. Hoping that you may be consoled in your great bereavement and that your children may be blessed in life, I ask you to accept the respect with which I have the honor to be, dear madame, your very faithful servant

DEAD ISSUES —A Copperhead paper of this State proceeds to take some of its party cotemporaries to task for hinting that certain "dead issues" should be dropped from politics These 'dead issues" are slavery, State sovereignty and the right of secession The Copperhead paper aforesaid 'would as soon think of obeying an order no longer to observe such "dead issues" as the Lord's Prayer or the Ten Commandments, as as to be persuaded to discard the "dead issues" which were advocated by the heroes of the late Southern Confederacy.' We don't it Slavery, State-sovereignty, doubt secession and rebellion have always been dearer to the "Democratic" heart than the doctrines of morality or piety. These virtues have long been "dead issues in the estimation of many members of the party.

It is hardly necessary to add that the author of the remarks on "dead issues," here alluded to, is the editor of the Confederate Democrat, and the puissant leader of the Copperheads of Oregon.

Horace Greely, in an address in Chicago, thus referred to West Point

"I am not a friend of our National Military Academy at West Point. I am a disbeliever in the policy of giving to any institution, however excellent, the privilege of officering our armies. I believe that we should have not one such, but a hundred in this country. I believe that every seminary should have its instructions in military drill, and every university its course of instruction in military tactics And when officers are wanted in the army, I believe there should be the freest competition, and the question not be, "Where did he learn," but "what does he know?" [Cheers.] But when I have said all this, I maintain that to-day West Point is the best practical school in the country. If I had a child in whom I took an interest, and was offered education for him where I choose, I would say give me West Point, merely because West Point is an institution where the pupil is trained with direct reference to practical things. What is taught there includes health, muscular physical activity, and a knowledge of what is necessary to be known I say, without reference to military affairs, I believe West Point, which I do not like, is the best practical school for boys in this country to-day."

THE IMPORTATION OF CATTLE PROHIBITED.—The following is the act just passed by Congress to prohibit the importation of cattle

An Act to prevent the spread of Foreign Diseases among the Cattle of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled

Section 1. That the importation of cattle be and hereby is prohibited. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to make such regulations as will give this law full and immediate effect, and to send copies of them to the proper officers in this country and to all officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That when the President shall give thirty days notice, by proclamation, that no further danger is to be apprehended from the spread of foreign infections or contagious diseases among cattle, this law shall be of no force, and cattle may be imported in the same way as before its passage

Passed the House of Representatives, December 11, 1865. EDWARD McPHERSON, Clk

A SERVICEABLE COAT.—The Stanton (Va) Spectator, in the following, gives an account of a family wedding coat that has proved a veritable heir-loom

"Many years since, an old German citizen of Pendleton county, when about to lead his fair "frow" to the hymenial altar purchased a broad cloth coat, in which he was married His wife presented him with many children, among whom were eight sons, all of whom were married in the same coat in which their father married their mother. The youngest of the eight sons had seven sons, all of whom were married in the same wedding-coat; and after the youngest son of the seven, or the youngest grandson of the original owner of the coat had led his blushing bride to the altar in his venerable grandfather's fashionable wedding coat, he sold it for the sum of $10 What has become of the coat since it has been sold we have not been advised, but suppose that some one is keeping it for the purpose of getting married in it"

THE PRESIDENT'S MANSION —The Washington correspondent of the Sacramento Union writes

There has been a regular muddle about the furnishing of the Executive Mansion, and it is said that after Lincoln's death much of the silver, linen, china and glass ware, with many of the smaller articles of furniture disappeared while the customary appropriation of $30 000 (not then voted) was frittered away Certain it is that this sum has just been appropriated and that another appropriation of $20 000 must be made to render the Executive Mansion decent Lincoln was sadly imposed upon by some of those around him The present steward of the Executive Mansion is a mulatto known to the old frequenters of Brown's Hotel as William Slade and reported to be the half brother to the Browns who used to own the establishment He is very intelligent, and such Virginia dignitaries as R M T Hunter do not hesitate to solicit his good offices in obtaining interviews for them with President Johnson

TALK OF UNITING —There is a talk of a union between the M E Church and the M E Church South at Corvallis If slavery was all that divided them we are of opinion that the 'divine institution' does not form much of a barrier to keep them separated If however as we have been taught religion is a vital principle one side or the other will have to be converted before there can be a union —Albany Journal

The Denver News says Gen H H Heath is organizing an expeditionary force to operate against the Plains Indians concentrating his force at Cottonwood whence they are to march south to the Smoky Hill, where the Indians are in large force

Not a single person, it is stated has been killed by a railroad accident in the German States since the origin of that mode of traveling Poor country that for coroners and undertakers

The Union Men of the South—Letter from a Southern Unionist

The following letter is from a Union man of a Southern State one who has been constantly and throughout faithful to the Union His remarks on the state of things that exists in the South are well worth considering That it was vital to the cause of republican government to exclude the old rebel oligarchy from political power is too evident to need more than simple assertion The restoration of this class to the places of which they were dispossessed by the military arm of the government, is not only fraught with extreme danger to the peace of the country, but is utterly unjust to the faithful Unionists of the South We commend the letter which follows to the consideration of those who think the present plan of restoration is unexceptionable in every particular, and that it does full justice to all

To the Editors of the New York Evening Post

In considering the question of reconstruction it is of the utmost importance to possess correct information touching the condition of affairs in the States lately in rebellion, as well as the views and purposes expressed generally by and among the people of the South

The writer has resided in one of the most populous and important of Southern States for a period of over thirty years and only quitted it long after the outbreak of the rebellion Having also revisited there during the past Summer the present feelings of the people are familiar to him and he can speak, therefore, from a very thorough acquaintance

It should be remembered that a truly democratic or republican Government never existed in any one of the late rebel States An oligarchy controlled them all and each A few men directed and shaped all political action The great majority of the people (speaking now of the whites) followed the leading men of either party because they had not been taught to read and think for themselves There was no system of free schools to foster that taste for self information which is the offspring of a free Government But those leading men were themselves well and largely read and being always on the stump and before the uneducated masses they wielded them to their purposes with a facility which the inhabitants of the free States cannot realize Had the rebel States been blessed with a free press for even five years before the rebellion it is not hazardous to assert that that dire calamity might have been averted As it was, indeed, every single Southern State except South Carolina (and there is a saving doubt even as to her), was pushed headlong into the rebellion by less than a majority of its white inhabitants The few were a unit, the many divided, and, therefore, powerless Hence the war, with its four years devastation and ruin

It is a matter of surprise to very many good and honest men to be told that a majority of the white people at the South were opposed to the rebellion Yet such was undeniably the case The reason of this apparent anomaly is partly given above There is however, another reason The institution of slavery educates men in an overbearing egotism and imperious self will, which engender the most arrogant self esteem and consequent weakness The Southern oligarchs blinded themselves to the true condition of public opinion at the North and throughout the world They or a large majority of them, believed in very deed that the Northern people would not fight for their country, deluding themselves with the idea that such men as Buchanan, Pierce, Wood Pugh and Vallandigham, would control public sentiment here Again, what may be called the froth of England and France was mistaken by them for substance, no account being made of the indisputable fact that the popular sentiment of the whole world was against slavery For while doubtless, the leading officials of England and France were desirous to see an end of the great republic, yet they could not openly and directly aid to that end—the masses (thank God) being not with them

Thus it came to pass, in the case of the self willed and self-deluded political chiefs of the South, that their eyes were blinded to the inevitable consequences of a war in the interest of slavery, and they were given over to believe a lie So much for the real instigation of the rebellion

We are to remember, however, that during all these dread years of war, a large body of white men at the South reverenced the old flag and were true to its colors. Many of these fled for their lives, and such as remained suffered all things but death itself When the Federal Government at length overpowered the rebellion, those persecuted loyalists indulged the hope of an era of peace and civil order They were entitled to expect a republican Government to replace the mockery and shame of former years What now is the fact?

President Johnson has doubtless done what he honestly believed to be for the best good of the whole country but the results do not seem to indicate a proper appreciation of his clemency on the part of the late rebels And, indeed, so long as you intrust to them—those who have been rampant rebels—the political power, just so long will the Southern States be governed by that same despotic oligarchy to which we have above referred One thing that is especially needed is that in the appointment of officers under the United States, none but men who have been staunchly and steadfastly Union should be elected. Be those officers great or small, let the United States Government show clearly by its selection of incumbents, that for those who tried all in their power to destroy it, it has little respect, and in such no present confidence Let it, on the contrary, manifest its due appreciation of the loyalty and devotion of those who have never swerved from their fealty, by placing them, and such as them, in the offices of trust and profit

It is a mistake to suppose that there cannot be found such faithful ones. In every county of every late rebel State you may find them Let them have powers and they will speedily rally an influence and exert a force that will prove successful to rid the country of the ex-slaveholding oligarchy—the pest of the republic and an offence to all patriots.

As things have been since last May the real Union men of the South have generally been careful to refrain from active political movement by the fear—yes, actually the fear—that the Federal troops would soon be withdrawn, leaving for them no chance of protection They have feared the recurrence of that same reign of terror which before the rebellion disgraced every Southern State. And no one familiar with the state of affairs at the South can doubt the justness of these fears,

Without question, there are thousands of good men, lately rebels who are honestly desirous of having the United States Government carry out its own measures of reconstruction fully and fairly, but such men cannot now control those fierce elements that aim to rule or ruin, any more than they could check them before the rebellion Twenty or thirty bad men banded together in a single county will govern it after their own irresponsible fashion, and will drive off all who are obnoxious to them, even though a Stephens may reside in their midst In such regions, law for a long time to come must be a dead letter, unless supported by a power that will be present and act for the United States

Magnanimity is understood and appreciated by a few and scouted at by the great mass as a weakness But one course will avail to manage these communities, namely to let it be understood distinctly that the United States Government is the first and supreme power, and that all persons who bear allegiance to it shall have equal and full protection wherever the flag of that Government floats And it must be clearly understood (as it is not now) that every infringement of the rights of such persons will be immediately and severely punished

If we do these things we may have hope of a restored Union and a regenerated republic To do less than these will result in a gradual retrogradation, until at length another Buchanan or something worse, because stronger men shall precipitate another and possibly more successful revolt

FOR AN IRRITATED THROAT COUGH OR COLD Brown's Bronchial Troches are offered with the fullest confidence in their efficacy They have been thoroughly tested and maintain the good reputation they have justly acquired. As there are imitations be sure and OBTAIN the genuine

MEETING OF THE COMMON COUNCIL.—The regular weekly meeting of the Common Council was held last evening at 7½ o'clock, Mayor Failing presiding.

A full board was present as follows: Messrs. Gillmore, Lownsdale, McCraken, Plummer, Rosenheim, Schuyler, Strowbridge, Thompson and Watkins.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

A petition signed by T M Warren, J B Harker, A C Gibbs and others relative to the opening of Clark street and setting apart the Parks in the manner designated on the map of the city between Salmon and Stark streets, was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

A petition signed by numerous citizens of the Third Ward asking that the grades of Sherman and Caruthers streets be reduced at the intersection of the Portland McAdamized road was referred to the committee on streets and public property.

The committee on streets and public property reported that it was not deemed advisable to repair Front street between Oak and Pine, and the report was adopted.

The same committee reported that the contractor, Mr E D Hutchinson, had finished a certain amount of sidewalk on Washington street and recommended that a warrant be drawn in his favor for the sum of $750. Report adopted and warrant authorized.

The same committee reported bill of S. Bliss for hauling material for filling in, at the corner of First and Alder streets correct and a warrant was authorized for $4 on the fund for repairs to streets.

Warrants were authorized in payment of claims against the city as follows: R Pittock, rent of engine house for Protection Company No 4 during January, $30; H L Pittock, advertising $30; H L Mayer, twelve dogs killed in January $24; Jas Tucker, work on cisterns, &c, $30 25; Smith Bros $37 50; F P Ward and P Saunders, as Policemen during January $100 each. Sundry other bills were referred to appropriate committees.

The amendment to Ordinance No 170, relative to licensing saloons came up under the heading of reading Engrossed Ordinances a third time.

Mr Plummer moved to amend so as to require a quarterly license of $50 from all saloon keepers selling liquor by the glass, and $25 from vendors of malt liquors and wines who sell by the quart, the same to be drank, upon the premises.

After considerable discussion the amendment was adopted with the following vote:—Ayes—Messrs. Gillmore, McCracken, Plummer, Rosenheim and Strowbridge—5. Nays—Messrs. Lownsdale, Schuyler, Thompson, and Watkins—4.

Mr Watkins moved to amend by inserting $25 in the place of $50, as relates to saloons retailing by the glass. The motion was lost.

Mr. Plummer moved to place the ordinance on its final passage.

Mr Thompson moved to amend by laying it upon the table. Amendment carried.

An ordinance reported by the minority of the select committee in reference to the same matter came up for final reading.

Mr Gillmore moved to dispense with the reading and indefinitely postpone. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Thompson, as the season for transplanting trees was advancing, the committee on streets and public property were authorized to take the necessary steps for the adornment of the public plaza.

On motion of Mr Lownsdale, the city engineer was [illegible] to the probable cost of improving First street, in accordance with published notice, and submit the same at the next meeting of the Council.

On motion of Mr. Schuyler, the committee on fire and water were authorized to report plans and estimate cost of fixing [illegible] until [illegible] to seven fire cisterns on First street along the line of the proposed improvement of that street.

On [illegible], a resolution offered by Mr. Watkins, requiring the city engineer to report, in his estimation, the best and [illegible] plan of sewage or drainage for the city, was carried.

War[illegible] declared in payment of the cost of [illegible] in front of the house of Co. [illegible] Company, No. 3, from the general fund.

On motion the Council adjourned.

FROM BOISE BASIN.—We are pleased to meet with Dr S B. Farnham of South Boise, who is here en route to New York, for the purpose of attending to the business of the New York and Idaho Gold and Silver Mining Company, of which he is Superintendent. The Doctor, in company with others, left Rocky Bar on the 21 of January, on snow shoes, the snow being very deep, and communication generally cut off. They reached Boise City in four and a half days, distance one hundred miles, the Doctor's pack weighing twenty-two pounds—which is a fair test of his [illegible]. Nothing but the most urgent [illegible], we should say, would start men out under such circumstances, and his business we understand to be of that character calculated to inspire the best [illegible]. It will be recollected that the property of this company has been "tied up" by attachments, liens, &c, during the past [illegible], through the institution of the [illegible], and [illegible] went on here to act with the Superintendent. Dr. F, having turned his attention to the first [illegible] of the company, now goes East prepared with propositions from the creditors to unite the works. At Boise City the party took sleighs for Umatilla, where they arrived in six days. Finding the river closed after a few days the party was increased, and ten men chartered a team of four horses for the Dalles. When near the John Day river they were [illegible] out on one of [illegible] by night coming upon them, after a severe day spent in breaking the crusted snow for their [illegible] to travel through, and all slept in the [illegible], barely [illegible] from the storm. The next [illegible] they [illegible] the snow eighteen inches deep to the river, where they found the bridge and ferry boats had been [illegible] away by a [illegible]. The boatman being on the west bank of the river, gave the party leave [illegible] to break into a house near by and cook of what they could find for [illegible], while a boat was made to bring them over. At length they got across, leaving the team, and on snow shoes in a few days more [illegible] the Dalles. Here the river was not open to steamers, and still [illegible] to travel, Dr. F, Mr. Carter, Mr. Smith, and others took a small boat, hoping to be able to reach the Cascades, when they might possibly meet a steamer from Portland. The wind prevailed so high that their frail craft soon [illegible], [illegible] was swamped, giving them no [illegible] time than was [illegible] to reach shore. Once again upon land they started on foot for the Cascades, [illegible] their destination on evening of the third day—but the Cascade had left for Portland just before they arrived at the landing. The best alternative then being [illegible], they waited until Monday, and arrived here that evening, thirty-three days from Rocky Bar.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER.—The steamer Cascade, Captain John Wolf, returned last evening from the Cascades, having connected with the Idaho from the Dalles. The river is now open and comparatively free from ice to the Dalles. The Mountaineer of Tuesday has the following regarding the upper river: "A number of persons arrived in this place from Umatilla yesterday, coming through in three days. Most of them came down to the ice [illegible], thirty miles below Umatilla, in a schooner, and from there made their way down overland. The [illegible] exists among these travelers that the ice will not go out of the [illegible] of the river until there is a great rise of water. At the head of the barrier the water is backed up some thirty feet in perpendicular height, and there is speculation upon the probable result of the ice suddenly breaking away, and the rush of this vast volume of water [illegible] upon it. At White Bluffs the Columbia river is frozen [illegible]. The weather has been colder there during the winter than at the Dalles, but the fall of snow [illegible] less." The Cascade leaves this city again to-day in the regular trade.

THE WILLAMETTE IRON WORKS.—The new iron works in this city, incorporated in September last, under the [illegible] name, yesterday went into successful operations, and the first "heat" of 2,600 pounds of iron was cast, in three-fourths of an hour after the "blowers" were turned upon the cupola. The Willamette Iron Works are situated near the Gas works, on Front street. The main building is 40 by 100 feet in size, properly divided into machine shop, blacksmith shop, foundry, pattern shop, &c. Mr John Nation is the Superintendent, and others of our citizens are the stockholders. Capital stock $20 000. The [illegible] which characterized the first heat, yesterday, is a fair indication of the success which promises to characterize the works. There was not a piece molded that did not turn out well. The company propose to improve the works from time to time as the business requires it to be done.

RELIEVED OF A TWENTY.—Jacob Levy visited the saloon, corner of Front and Madison, on Tuesday night, and was waited upon by one of the "pretty" girls who attend customers at that place of business. He called for four bits worth of lager, and gave the chaste Matilda a twenty in payment for the same, but expected change, which he failed to get, and after making a fuss about it, had the girl [illegible]. She will appear for trial to-day before Recorder Hoffman.

SALE OF EMIGRANT.—There was a large attendance yesterday at the sale of Mr. A B Richardson, at which the beautiful horse Emigrant was sold to Messrs. Bills & Co, for the sum of $2,750. The horse could not have fallen into better hands, and his friends congratulate Bills & Co. on their good fortune in obtaining him. At so reasonable a figure the firm should congratulate themselves.

SAILED.—By the arrival of the steamer John H Couch yesterday from Astoria, we learn that the bark Samuel Merritt went to sea in tow of the tug on Saturday, and the steamship Oregon went to sea on Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The bar, which has continued very rough so long, was quiet on Monday but somewhat foggy.

LIVE OAK GEORGE.—The raffle for this horse was concluded on Tuesday night, at the Oro Fino. The results of the first evening were not changed, and the possession of the horse rests with Sheriff Stitzel and Mr. Charles Knowles who threw by proxy for Judge Page, who is now absent in California.

RECORDER'S COURT—HOFFMAN J February 7th 1866.—Kagan, arrested on complaint of Lizzie Pul, for smashing the sash door of her saloon was not found guilty, and was discharged. Jas Halpin for firing a pistol in the streets paid a fine and was discharged.

SECOND ANNUAL BALL.—This evening the Hebrew Ladies' Benevolent Society give their second annual ball at Turn Verein Hall. From the management we infer that the reunion will be one worthy of the object, and hope to see it well attended as it should be.

LUMBER FOR VANCOUVER.—The steamer John H Couch which arrived yesterday, was delayed on her trip from Astoria in consequence of having taken to Vancouver from Oak Point, the barge E D Baker heavily laden with lumber.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS' COURT.—The Court of Commissioners for Multnomah county meets to-day.

DELEGATES.—The Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department meet this evening at the Council Chamber.

ENVY.—Envy is a strong characteristic of littleness of mind, a truly noble and generous man feels no enmity towards a successful rival. It is related of an Arabian King, that when his architect had finished for him a structure of surpassing magnificence and beauty, he ordered him to be thrown from its highest tower for fear that he might build a palace of equal or superior beauty for some rival King.

A NEW HAMPSHIRE BOY.—A good thing is floating about New York at the expense of General Kilpatrick. The General returned there lately from Boston. While engaged in very earnest conversation on the cars, and gesticulating very freely—as is Kilpatrick's way of doing things—one of his Staff noticed a young New Hampshire boy, listening very attentively, with his mouth and eyes wide open. The officer, thinking to have some sport, addressed the unsophisticated youth and got floored as follows:

Major H.—"My boy, do you know who that gentleman is you are looking at so hard?"

Boy—"No, I don't, who is he?"

Major H.—"Why, that is Major General Kilpatrick."

Boy—"You don't say so! Ain't he some on gabbing though?"

The party retired to the smoking car, amidst the roars of laughter from the other passengers, the boy still looking as innocent as a lamb. Say "gabbing" to Kil. if you want an ugly look.

Three remarkable widows are living in New York. The first is Mrs John J. Crittenden, tall, handsome and stately, in splendid health and magnificently dressed. The second is Mrs Daniel Webster, not so well preserved, nor so young but still a noticeable lady. The last is Mrs Major General Philip Kearney, a magnificent woman in respect to appearances with much natural beauty, and a great deal that is artificial. General Kearney, it will be remembered, left two widows—each of whom was designated in his will as his wife. Both were amply provided for in his will. The first was Diana Cuthbert Bullitt of Louisville Ky, and the last Miss Maxwell of New York.

An Irishman recently stopped at a hotel between Peru and Des Moines, where pretty high bills were charged. In the morning, the landlord made out the amount of the "damage," and presented it to Pat. After he had glanced over it, the latter looked the landlord in the face and exclaimed: "Ye put me in mind of a snipe!" "Why?" asked the landlord. "Bekase ye're very nigh all bill."

The Gold Hill News says George Talmage was anxious to get a clerkship in the Legislature. He was button holing a member on the subject. Another steps up and commences to interruptingly discuss the "Game Law" with George's "game." "Oh d—— the Game Law," exclaimed George, "I'm talking business. We've no game in Storey county 'cept seven up!"

AFFAIRS OF GOLD.—The following sublime and patriotic sentiments from one of Henry Ward Beecher's addresses during the dark days of the war is worth preserving:

"If the day shall come, in one or five or ten years, in which the old honored and historic banner shall float over every State in the South; if the day shall come when that which was the accursed cause of this dire and atrocious war—Slavery—shall be done away—if the day shall come when there shall be liberty of the press such as there never has been; if the day shall come when men shall have Common Schools to send their children to, which they never had in the South; if the day shall come when the lands shall not be parceled in gigantic plantations, in the hands of a few oligarchs—but shall be parceled out to honest farmers, every man owning his little; in short, if the day shall come when the people or humanity, the fruition and privileges of liberty shall prevail in every part of the United States, it will be worth all the blood, and tears and woe. You are impatient, and yet God dwelleth in eternity and has an infinite leisure to roll forward the affairs of men not to suit the hot impatience of those who are but children of a day, and cannot wait or linger for long, but according to the infinite circle on which He measures time and events, expedites or retards as it pleases Him, and if He heard our cries or prayers not thrice would the months revolve but peace would come. But the strong crying and prayers of millions have not brought peace, but only thickening war. We accept the Providence, the duty is plain."

A writer in the Chicago Post describes how he got out of a bad scrape in a police court, in the following manner: "The next morning, the judge of the court sent for me. I went down and he received me cordially. Said he had heard of the wonderful things I had accomplished at Bryan Hall, and was proud of me. I was a promising young man and all that. Then he offered a toast: 'Guilty or not guilty?' I responded in a brief but eloquent speech, setting forth the importance of the occasion that brought us together. After the usual ceremonies I loaned the city ten dollars."

A Terrible Indictment. — Mr. Proudfit, formerly a leading Democrat in Wisconsin and for some time an Adjutant in a cavalry regiment in the service, presented in the Union Convention held at Madison in that State, the following bill of indictment against the Democratic party:

Resolved, That the Democratic party stands indicted at the bar of an outraged public opinion for the following high crimes and misdemeanors:

Through its leading men and organs it has encouraged and sympathized with black and causeless treason;

It has displayed cowardice before the public enemy;

It has incited mobs to pillage, murder and destroy;

It has sought to disfranchise white soldiers of lawful age;

It has been unceasing in its praise of its country's barbarous and brutal foes;

It has denounced its country's defenders as "minions of despotism," "Lincoln's hirelings," and with other opprobrious epithets;

It has been factious and false in its opposition to the Government throughout the war;

It has opposed enlistments of white men;

It has opposed enlistments of colored men;

It has opposed drafting with compensation;

It has advised insurrection in loyal States;

It has sought and hoped for foreign interference;

It has excused and palliated the crime of rebels in hounding, starving and murdering prisoners of war;

It has by lying and intrigues sought to injure the public credit;

It has helped with all its power to keep down the price of currency and raise the price of the necessaries of life;

It has advocated the assassination of the public servants of the people, who were duly elected and installed;

It declared the war a failure, and indicated a willingness to submit to armed treason at a time when that treason was about to receive its death blow;

It has favored and supported the aristocratic against the Democratic idea;

It has fawned upon those who conspired for its own ruin, and licked the hand that smote it;

It has said when the President called for soldiers to help the veterans at the front, "Let Democrats stay at home, and let abolitionists, niggers and Indians go and fight";

It has said that under the policy of the Government the armies of the Union could not succeed;

It has continually endeavored by sophistry and falsehood to divide the North and destroy the Nation;

It has held that triumphs of the Union arms were violations of the Constitution;

It has termed the attempt to supply the starving garrison of Fort Sumter in April, 1861, a disgraceful political trick to give the Administration an excuse to declare war.

All these sins and many more it must answer for in the coming trial, and we join this issue with a firm reliance upon Almighty God, and the intelligence that he has given his people.

Fenian Funds. — The Fenian explosion has occurred sooner than was expected; but notwithstanding the serious split which seemingly involves the leaders of both factions in common infamy and possibly ultimate ruin, the funds are yet pouring into the treasury here at the rate of $120,000 a month. These moneys are contributed by the subordinate Circles throughout the United States and Canada, and reach the Secretary of the O'Mahony Treasury in sums of from twenty cents to seven thousand dollars—the latter representing the last contribution that has been acknowledged from California. The total that O'Mahony's Treasurer credits to your State for the month of October is $10,500, from the hands of Jeremiah Cavanagh, of San Francisco, the State Center; it is said that the receipts for November are even larger. What they may have been previous to October nobody outside the Presidential palace at Union Square has been informed. According to the Treasurer's report, Chicago appears to have been the largest contributor, she having given in October $12,200. St. Louis gave $9,100, and thirty-four cities and towns, in every part of the United States and Canadas, contributed upward of $500 each. These figures, however, are not by any means indicative of the strength of the Brotherhood in the places whence the money came; for only in a few instances do the exhibit more than a mere installment of moneys due on the "final call."

This "final call" was a demand by the President for $20 from every member of the Brotherhood, the money to be used in fitting out an expedition to strike the first blow. The call was for $20 over and above any former indebtedness on [illegible] calls or on monthly dues. It was to supply the way that should poison the minds of the Irishmen who form so large a part of the British home army, and the aggregate was presumed to be ample for the liberation of Ireland. The call was made at about the date of the extraordinary session of the Fenian Congress in Philadelphia in [illegible] last, and for three months previous to that time the Treasurer was in receipt of about $50,000 weekly. But as no public report has been made of any [illegible] which were contributed previous to September, no estimate can be made of the capital that the Brotherhood have in hand. An approximate estimate of the probable response to the "final call" may be made from the official report of the Fenian Corresponding Secretary, showing that in the United States there were on the 28th of October, 613 Circles, with an average membership of three hundred persons each. The [illegible], for obvious reasons, omits mention of the many circles that flourish in the British Provinces; but the number in Her Majesty's dominions will bring the figures up to seven hundred Circles in North America. This gives the Brotherhood 210,000 members here; and if each sends in the required $20, the Secretary (or Secretaries) of the Treasury will soon have $4,200,000 in addition to whatever fund they may now control.—Cor. Sac. Union.

The Sugar Interest of Louisiana. — The following, taken from the Planter's Banner, we find in the Sacramento Union:

We publish to-day from [illegible] to week new proofs that the sugar parishes of Louisiana will, in a few years, be in a flourishing condition once more. From twelve to twenty cents per pound will be the price of sugar for at least ten years. All that the sugar planters now want, is laborers, and they will doubtless be able to get less than half their original number without much trouble. They will be in full blast in three years; some will have a [illegible] of sugar to fall next year. And the surplus money of the planters will not be invested as formerly; it will help to build up all interests in the State, instead of the planting interests and those of the "money changers." If negroes will not work, high prices of sugar will bring white laborers to the cultivation of the cane. The lands will be cultivated—sugar will be raised. While sugar brings twelve and fifteen cents per pound these sugar regions must prosper. And sugar cannot become cheaper. This fact we regard as indisputable. Our accounts from the sugar parishes, from the coast and all directions, go to show that the planters generally have an ardent desire to commence repairing damages at once, where they have not already commenced, and plant cane and corn, to the extent of their ability. Confidence is now being restored as rapidly as could possibly be expected. The idea is now almost universally adopted that sugar growing will pay, even under the heavy disadvantages resulting from the war. Money and labor are needed, and money and labor the planters will have—perhaps not at once, but they will come. We saw a gentleman from the coast a few days since, who says that those who have taken hold of sugar-planting in good earnest, and who understand the business, have succeeded well. But they have had difficulties to contend with which they will never have again. The negroes heads have been filled with foolish hopes in regard to living in ease and idleness. The war was progressing while they worked their plantations, and sugar was lower in price than it will be again in twenty years. Changes now will all be for the better. We may move slowly at first but with patience, industry and hope our planters will succeed. The war has brought desolation to our fields and freedom to the slave, but these losses may yet be compensated in a great measure by the high price of sugar, which is, also, the result of the war.

An Historical House Under the Hammer. The Boston Traveler announces an auction sale at the old family mansion of Governor Eustis, on Eustis street, Roxbury, Massachusetts, and adds that the sale will include many articles of interest as relics, among them, chairs presented to Governor Eustis while Ambassador at the Hague, by the Duke of Kent, Queen Victoria's father; the furniture of Lafayette's chamber while the guest of Governor Eustis, which has not since been disturbed, a secretary presented to Governor Eustis, by General Warren; antique dinner set, rare cut glass, old pictures, vases, time-pieces, etc., nearly all in the family during the life of Governor Eustis. In this stately mansion Governor Eustis lived and flourished, and here he maintained republican state till his death, in 1825, not long after the visit of Lafayette to his house. Governor Eustis, in his youth, studied medicine with his neighbor, General Warren, and in the morning before the battle, drove the gallant officer to the vicinity of Bunker Hill in a chaise. To this mansion General Washington came temporarily when he assumed command of the armies that being near Boston. The house was then in the glory of its early [illegible] having been built by the royal Governor Shirley, who held his vice regal court there before [illegible]. It [illegible] from England. Although [illegible] out of repair, it still bears evidence of its former excellence and state, and the broad staircase [illegible] the grand stairway [illegible] from Daniel Webster the remark as he was being lighted to his chamber one night while a guest: "What! did the old Governor drive up to bed with his coach and four?" Mrs. Eustis, the widow of the Governor, had a life interest in the estate and died there only a few months ago. She was the niece of John Langdon of New Hampshire and daughter of Governor Langdon of that State. The estate now goes to the descendants of Governor Eustis.

THE STANDARD AMERICAN BILLIARD TABLES!

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS.

MESSRS. PHELAN & COLLENDER

WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of persons wanting Billiard Tables to the great superiority of the above tables, manufactured exclusively at their establishment.

At the Billiard Congress of 1863, composed of all the first class players of America, it was unanimously resolved that tables of our manufacture should be used at all matches for the Championship as the best and only reliable tables.

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges, who have universally pronounced them unequaled for general excellence and durability.

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a Patent from the French Government, for our improvement in Billiard Cushions.

We employ, in the construction of our tables a variety of machines specially made for the purpose, by means of which we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in Billiard manufacture.

Having a long experience and thorough knowledge of all the requirements of Billiards, and constantly on hand a large stock of the best and most thoroughly seasoned materials, we are prepared to furnish everything required in the Billiard line with unprecedented dispatch.

The eminent French Billiard Player, M. Berger, has published the following opinion:

"New York, 2d August, 1861.

"On the eve of leaving the United States, I am happy to declare to all amateurs of Billiards that, after a tour of eleven months through the principal cities, I have been enabled to judge in a satisfactory manner of the superiority of the Billiard Tables manufactured by Phelan & Collender. The system of manufacturing is so superior that I am happy to introduce their style of cushion into France. They have united to their manufacture of American Billiard Tables that of the French Tables, of remarkable excellence and beauty. For these reasons, I am happy to make this declaration.

"BERGER, CLAUDIUS,
Prof. of Billiards, Paris."

Parties ordering from us will find our prices as low as good work can possibly be made for. We sell first-class articles at a fair price, and will not make an inferior article at any price.

Orders by mail carefully and promptly executed. Illustrated Catalogues and Price Lists sent by mail. The "BILLIARD CUE," a Journal published in the interest of Billiards and containing details of all novelties, a copious record of Billiard news, and everything of interest to amateurs of Billiards, sent free on application.

M. E. HUGHES,
730 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Cal., is our only authorized Agent on the Pacific coast, to whom all orders should be addressed.

CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, Asthma, Croup,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest and Lungs, Difficult Breathing and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary Organs.

ITS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERATIVE, SUDORIFIC, SEDATIVE, DIAPHORETIC AND DIURETIC, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; CHANGES THE SECRETIONS AND PURIFIES THE BLOOD, heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is WARRANTED TO BREAK UP THE MOST DISTRESSING COUGH IN A FEW HOURS' TIME, if not of too long standing. IT IS WARRANTED to give entire satisfaction even in the MOST CONFIRMED CASES OF CONSUMPTION! IT IS WARRANTED NOT to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form. IT IS WARRANTED TO BE PERFECTLY HARMLESS to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy for restoring the system. THERE IS NO REAL NECESSITY FOR SO MANY DEATHS BY CONSUMPTION, when ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM will prevent it if only taken in time.
